

Paul Cronjé
Managing Director
Clyde Travel Management

Paul began his career as a travel consultant in tour operations in 2002. He progressed to Sales Manager within the same organization before accepting the role as General Manager at Clyde Travel Management in 2008 and ultimately Managing Director in 2017.

A tourism graduate from both the Cape Peninsula University of Technology (South Africa) and the Strathclyde Business School in Glasgow, Paul has set out to embrace the opportunities both technology and multi-national collaboration with industry stakeholders afford.

Clyde has always been a TMC within a larger maritime ownership structure, allowing it direct access to and influence over the marine sphere's logistics needs.

Paul's time at Clyde has witnessed an internationalization of the brand, providing client support through a network of offices, as well as transitioning priority of focus towards crew travel management for the marine and offshore sector. These twin objectives have resulted in a substantially more diverse and increased workforce, while also championing digitalisation.
